YOUTH AWARDED $200 FOR INJURY; IN FRIEND'S CAR

Edward H. Labs, 16, Kintnersville, Given Damages in Settlement

BRISTOL HUSBAND SUE

Mrs. Edna Hearn Begins An Action Against Husbands For Divorce

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 16—Judge Calvin S. Boyer has approved and authorized a compromise settlement by which Edward H. Labs, Jr., 16, Kintnersville, was awarded $200 and his father, Edward H. Labs, Sr., is awarded $28.50 in the Court of Common Pleas.

The minor plaintiff was the guest of and in the automobile of Lester P. Frey, August 21, when he figured in an automobile accident at the intersection of Old York Road and Alms-house Road.

According to the petition, the minor plaintiff, who suffered a fracture of the left clavicle and other injuries, was compelled to expend the sum of $28.50 for hospital and physicians' services.

Charging her husband, Claude Hearn, with making her life intolerable and burdensome, Edna Hearn has begun an action in divorce in the Court of Common Pleas here.

According to the libel in divorce, the libellant and respondent were married by Justice of the Peace Irvin M. James, October 13, 1932, in Doylestown.

The libellant's address is Dunkin avenue in Croydon and that of her husband is 843 Garden street, Bristol.

The libellant alleges that she was compelled to leave her home February 5, 1938, because of intolerable and burdensome conditions.

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 16—Judge Calvin S. Boyer, who has been holding criminal court in Stroudsburg, Monroe county, for the past two days for Judge Samuel E. Shull, yesterday returned to the bench here when he granted a parole to George Fitzgerald, of Morrisville, who had served his minimum term on a charge of driving while drunk.

Fitzgerald was sentenced to 30 days to one year in the county prison. Judge Boyer warned Fitzgerald that the parole was on condition that he surrender his driver's license immediately to the Clerk of Quarter Sessions for certification to Harrisburg, and that he was simply serving the balance of his term of one year out-of-doors.

"If you get into trouble before the maximum term has expired you will be brought back and compelled to serve the remainder of the year," Judge Boyer warned Fitzgerald. "I don't expect to see you again."

"Don't worry, I'll not be back again, Your Honor," Fitzgerald replied.

Fitzgerald said that he had no money available to pay the costs and that his family needed what money he intended to earn on a new job that he has promised. Judge Boyer directed that the costs be paid by the county.

Announcement was made yesterday that the new county officers will be sworn in publicly at the Court House on Tuesday morning, January 2, at 10 o'clock. The new officers include one Judge, Register of Wills, Clerk of Quarter Sessions, Clerk of Orphans' Court, three county Commissioners, County Treasurer, Recorder of Deeds, and a Coroner.

FLOWERING SHRUBS ARE BASIS FOR A LECTURE

Harry Wood Gives Illustrated Talk To Natural Science Association

OFFICERS ARE ELECTED

Harry Wood, head gardener at the Swarthmore Arthur Hoyt Scott Foundation, gave an illustrated talk before a meeting of Bucks County Natural Science Association, at George School, Wednesday evening. He showed pictures of various shrubs on the campus, starting with those which flower in February, and following through to the end of June. He said it was possible to extend the bloom of azaleas over a considerable period if care is exercised in selection of varieties. He named nudiflora, schlippenbachii, mollis and vasyi as good species. Rhododendrons differ also in color, size and time of flowering. Other Heaths include both native and Japanese Andromeda (Pieris foribunda and Japonica), Loxocoele catesbaei and the less known Enkianthus with its pale pink bells of late May.

Tree peony culture was described. The plant originated in China but the Japanese deserve the credit of developing the lovely shades and textures. Swarthmore has a remarkable collection of these too-seldom-grown plants. Mr. Wood invited the association to visit the Foundation many times in a year in order to see the various season's blossoms. Guides will, he said, explain names, soil requirements, etc. Cuttings, surplus bulbs and plants are given only to institutions. Accompanying Mr. Wood were two gardeners of note: John Tonkin, Morris Arboretum, Chestnut Hill; and Percy Adams, Rose Valley Nurseries.

At the business meeting which preceded the lecture, election of officers resulted as follows: President, Edward A. Briggs, Newtown; first vice-president, ...

Work Progressing On New Factory Building

The building which is in the course of construction and which is to be occupied by Sol Friedman & Son Inc., manufacturers of women's slips at Dorrance and Canal streets, is now well underway.

The building is of cinder block and glass and is being built by Anthony Cesarini, Bristol contractor. The foundations have been placed and the walls are now being erected.

Relief Checks Show Drop in Bucks County

State Treasurer, F. Clair Ross, today announced that assistance disbursements in Bucks County for the week ending today amounted to $3,149.40, a drop of $112.10 below relief payments for last week when a total of $3,261.50 went to relief clients in this county. Ross said that the total number of checks sent into the county amounted to 474. Last week the total was 488, he stated.

Compared with the corresponding week of last year, relief payments here are down $1,615.70, the State Treasurer said. One year ago total relief disbursements in Bucks County totaled $4,765.10 for the week. At that time 598 checks were sent into the county.

Relief payments announced by Ross show that Chester County received $5,596.30 during the week, Delaware county, $9,658.50, Lehigh, $7,778.10, Montgomery, $7,603.60, Northampton, $7,701.50 and Philadelphia, $4,559.20.

Bristol Boy Returns

Philadelphia, Dec. 16—Ralph Alfonsi, 12-year-old son of Stella Alfonsi, acquitted of the arsenic ring slaying of her husband, was back at home with his mother in Bristol today.

Lately for his playmates in the Port Richmond section of Philadelphia, where he once lived, Ralph ran away and came here last Tuesday. When he visited the Belgrade and Clearfield street police station, his mother was notified and took him home.

The European Situation

If one were to go by the French and German official communiques today, Europe approaches the Christmastide in perfect tranquillity.

Said Paris: "Nothing important to report."

Berlin echoed: "No particular events."

With fighting on the Western Front thus dismissed in those seven words, world attention centered on the prospects of a dramatic week-end dash for freedom by the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee.

Her sailors—denied aid by Uruguay—a maritime workers—labored frantically to make the 10,000-ton warship seaworthy by the deadline of 5 p. m. (3.30 P. M., EST) Sunday which the Uruguayan government is expected to set.

While they riveted new steel plates onto the gaping holes in her sides blasted by the shells from three British cruisers Wednesday, two of the cruisers—probably reinforced by other fighting craft—lurked off the estuary of the river Platte alert to intercept the Graf Spee.

The Graf Spee may snatch another 24 hours' grace by crossing the Platte to Buenos Aires.

Or she may dash through the line of British ships—while have a space of 75 miles to guard across the mouth of the vast river.

Uruguay meanwhile prepared to ask the United States and the other 20 American republics to join in a protest against fighting within the 300-mile neutrality zone established at the recent Panama Conference.

CANAL AND PARKWAY APPEAR TO BE ASSURED

William F. Taylor Addresses Doylestown Rotary Club On the Subject

PRAISES ASSEMBLYMEN

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 16—In the opinion of William F. Taylor, artist and secretary of the Delaware Valley Protective Association "less than 100 years from now Bucks Countians will be wondering why there was ever a question about hastening steps to preserve the beauties of the Delaware Valley."

Mr. Taylor spoke to members of the Rotary Club here at the weekly dinner meeting.

The canal and parkway are now assured, he said, of preservation as the property of the State, as there is assurance from the president of the canal company that it is ready to turn over all of the property, including the part that has been bringing in an income of $15,000 annually—at no cost to the State.

Since the maintenance of the canal cost only about $17,000 a year, Mr. Taylor pointed out, the State for the present would be put to very little expense to preserve this great public asset.

But this, he hastily pointed out, Continued on Page Four Heart Failure!

(By "The Stroller")
A certain taxi driver about town is an avid fan of the radio program which features selection of recipients for a $1,000 prize, choosing names from telephone directories.

Many a time has he sat mid-way between the radio and telephone, just hoping against hope that he might be lucky.

A couple of weeks ago just as the radio announcer put through a call to a prospective recipient, the telephone jangled in the taxi driver's home in the sixth ward. He almost hit the ceiling on the rebound from his chair, so quick was his response. The next week the same thing occurred.

Now he is "after the scalp" of the pal who knows of his faithful attention to that particular program, and who timed his telephone call to the second.

MOTHER BENEFICIARY UNDER WILL OF SON

Letters in Estate of Dan'l Seipt, Langhorne, Granted To Peoples Nat'l Bank

OTHER WILLS ARE FILED

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 16—Letters of administration in the estate of Daniel Seipt, Langhorne, have been granted to the People's National Bank and Trust Company of Langhorne, amounting to $1,000. The mother, Irene S. Seipt, Langhorne, is the beneficiary.

Leaving an estate of $50,000 and upwards, Emma A. Roeder, of Quakertown, who died November 5, left bequests totaling more than $20,000 to a hospital, an old folks' home, an institution for cripples, a Sunday school unit, and a church.

According to her will, probated in the Register of Wills' office, here, Quakertown Community Hospital was bequeathed $10,000 for free beds in memory of her parents, Nathan C. and Lucinda A. Roeder.

The Phoebe Deaconess and Old Folks' Home at Allentown was bequeathed $5,000, and the Good Shepherd Home at Allentown, was bequeathed $2,000. The junior department of the Sunday school of First Reformed Church, of Quakertown, was bequeathed $1,000, and the sum of $2,000 was placed in trust to provide an income for the benefit of Trinity Reformed Church, Spinnerstown.

The major bequest was the creation of a trust fund of $34,000 in the Quakertown Trust Company which will provide an income for life for a nephew, R. Lamar Fretz. Upon his death it will be bequeathed to the Eastern Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church at Lancaster for the establishment of a Roeder Chair of Sacred Music in memory of the testatrix's father, Nathan C. Roeder and family.

A second trust fund of $1,000 was created for the benefit of the nephew, R. Lamar Fretz, with the provision that at his death it will be inherited by the Quakertown Community Hospital.

The will, which was executed January 25, 1937, directed that the Quakertown Community Hospital, and Bethlehem Orphans' Home at Womelsdorf, should inherit the residue. The executor, Hercules H. Reinhart, was bequeathed $1,000.

Emma Levy, Trumbauersville, who left a personal estate of $3,000 and real estate valued at $15,000, including a house and lot in Trumbauersville, named seven kin as heirs. The individual bequests are as follows: Harry, $200; Howard, $200; Ada, $150; Pearl, $200; Helen, $50; Verna, $50, and Lloyd, $100. The residue will be inherited by Howard, Harry, Pearl and Ada. Howard, Harry and Ada Levy, all of Trumbauersville, were named executors.

A widow, Sophia Rush, Doylestown R. D. No. 1, who was named executrix, was bequeathed the $5,000 estate of her husband, Howard Rush, Plumstead township, without reservation.

Four children, Emma Harr, Ralph, Richard and George Horne, will inherit the $1,000 personal and $100 real estate holdings, including three lots in Trumbauersville, of Laura K. Horne, Quakertown. Ralph Horne, 25 Ambler street, and Richard Horne, 20 North Ninth street, both of Quakertown, were named executors.

Mrs. Edith R. Denn, Gwynedd Valley, was bequeathed the $750 personal and $1,000 real estate holdings of Howard H. Denn, Warmistown township. The real estate consists of one-half interest at 4408 Wain street, Frankford.

A son, James J. Murphy, Warrington, will inherit the $750 personal and $2,000 real estate holdings of James Murphy, Warrington township. The real estate consists of properties at 3562 New Queen street, Falls of Schuylkill, and at 9 First avenue, Mantua, N. J.

Three heirs, Harry, Holland, and a trust fund which was bequeathed to Harry for the benefit of Lewis, will share the estate of Catherine Beaver, Chalfont, who left a personal estate of $2,200 and real estate valued at $1,200. Harry Beaver, 4529 North 18th street, Phila., was named the executor. Continued on Page Four

Presentations Made at Special Assembly Program Yesterday in Auditorium

SCARBOROUGH ELECTED

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Dec. 16—By vote of 16-1, Bob Scarborough, brilliant running, punting and passing star of the Bensalem Owl gridders was elected to succeed Charlie Mudie, as captain of the team in 1940.

This was announced in the school auditorium here yesterday afternoon at which time coach George Reimer awarded the gridders with their letters for the past campaign in a special assembly program dedicated to athletics.

The single vote against the All-Conference quarterback was cast by none other than Scarborough himself, so in effect, he was elected by a unanimous vote. Mudie, the passing captain, was also selected on the All-Conference eleven for his fine play at his guard post during the season just closed.

Coach George Reimer presented 17 players and two managers with varsity emblems for their work during the 1939 campaign. Starting with captain Charlie Mudie, then following with all seniors who won their awards, coach Reimer then announced the captain-elect, Scarborough, who was given a great hand upon receiving his letter and the honor bestowed upon him by his team mates.

Beside Scarborough, seven other juniors were awarded letters along with a trio of sophomores. The remaining six were seniors.

Coach Reimer, in a brief talk to the student body, summarized the events of the past season and commended the team for its spirit and sportsmanship. He cited the calmness and level-headedness of the squad in the midst of "disaster" which became their lot as a result of the now famous "pass-interference" ruling called against them in the closing minutes of the tilt with Morrisville.

He also pointed out the season's highlight for the Owls in beating Bristol High in the season's opening tilt at Cornwells, 7-6. Not only was that upset the highlight of the Owls season, but it was the major scholastic upset in local circles for the 1939 campaign and was the highlight of the entire season in this section.

SPRIT OF CHRISTMAS

There are those, unfortunately, whose plans for the observance of Christmas concern only themselves, their own families, their own homes. If they have a beautiful tree, brilliantly illuminated, with an abundance of gifts for themselves and their families, a dinner which makes them pleasantly uncomfortable and if a cheerful spirit pervades the house during the holiday season, Christmas has been a success.

Subjected to honest analysis, however, such a Christmas is essentially a selfish business, lacking in every element necessary to a proper observance of the holiday. A Christmas which involves no thought of little children whose stockings and stomachs will be empty Christmas morning, no thought of the aged and forgotten poor, degenerates into nothing more important than a pagan festival and cannot be productive of even a small degree of true happiness.

Christmas, if it is to be distinguished by the spirit of the First Christmas, must be primarily religious and spiritual in character and its adequate observance involves charity toward others, especially the children of misfortune.

DIAMOND'S GRAND OLD MAN

Deals involving players of Boston, Pittsburgh and Cincinnati of the National League featured the first important trading deals at the baseball convention and market in Cincinnati. Involved is not only the strategy of the owners and managers of the teams but also the expenditure of large sums of cash, the shifting from town to town of base ball stars under the swap system, the cracker-box forums of fans who know as much about these things as the sports moguls, if not more, and the vital element of the effect on the baseball clubs of 1940 of these transactions in December, 1939.

All of this is most interesting to the fans, but many will like best in the space given over to the magnates' meeting the picture which dolls up the page. It shows Connie Mack in close proximity to Bill Klem. The first has been called the "grand old man of baseball," a proper designation, for he has guided baseball teams for so long that man's mind goes not to the contrary, and the second, as umpire, has been in the middle of No. Man's Land for 37 years.

Baseball would be nothing without fields and stands and teams and balls and bats and fans, but it is the human element which does more than anything else to keep the game at top notch in the keen competition for public interest. The Babe Ruths and Christy Mathewsons and Dizzy Deans and Walter Johnsons have given the color and the sparkle to the great game. It is of such as these that the human element is composed.

The baseball Hall of Fame has many niches in which are enshrined the baseball heroes, living and of the past. One of the most prominent of these is reserved for Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics from the beginning of the American League to the present day, and still going strong. His name is not to be found in Who's Who in America, but that is the book's loss, not his. America is the gainer because of the active career of Connie Mack for half a century.

"RED EARTH" by TOM GILL

SYNOPSIS

Jack Douglas returns to his Miracle Mesa ranch, after an absence of six years, to find it on the verge of ruin and the countryside terrorized by a mysterious band of killers called "The Raiders," who are driving the ranchers off their property. His Aunt Ines and fiancée, Lola, rejoice at his homecoming, feeling that they now have a master to look after them. Dona Ines said if it were not for Ed Paxton, the ranch foreman, she would not have known where to turn. His first day home, Jack goes riding with his vaquero and friend, Frank Baker. The latter says the miners in Cobre confiscate the water rights of the ranchers and that the cattlemen are doing nothing about it. "What we need is a he-man-boss. We need you!" he tells Jack. Pointing to an adobe dwelling in the canyon, Frank adds, "It's the meeting place of the Brotherhood. Nearly every peon in the country swears allegiance to the Brotherhood instead of the man who employs him." A tattered peon shuffles down the path. "One of our own herders," Baker remarks and pointing to a small tent nearby adds, "He stays there." Leaving Baker, Douglas goes to visit his old friend, Forest Ranger Sam Record, who warns Jack that he is one of three ranchers marked for death by The Raiders. As to the other two, Bradshaw left the country and Wilson is dead. Douglas refuses to run, however, so the ranger advises him to "trust no one." The head of The Raiders, Record says, is a giant Chinese known as "The Yellow Killer." Jack's dinner guests that evening are Alison Neale, owner of the neighboring ranch, whose father was killed by The Raiders, Father Bodine of the border mission, and his artist nephew, Paul Bodine, who has an interest in the Cobre mines. Talk turns to Cobre and The Raiders but, remembering Record's warning "Trust no one," Jack is careful not to commit himself. Ed Paxton interrupts the party with the news that Frank Baker has been killed by The Raiders.

CHAPTER X

As if from far away Jack heard Alison's words to Paxton.

"You've got to do something to ride those murderers down," the girl was urging. "You can't just—take it. My riders will go with you—I'll go. If they murdered Frank in broad daylight someone may have seen it."

Paxton's face flushed. "You know as well as I do that everybody's afraid to talk. Baker was shot near the morada and I'm not going to snoop around there." He saw the look of open contempt in her eyes. "Go on," he challenged, "say what you're thinking."

"I think you're a coward," the clear voice answered, "a worthless coward."

"No man would say that, Miss Neale."

"No man would even speak to you."

In a last desperate appeal she turned to Douglas. "When I heard you were coming back here, you brought me hope for the first time in years. I thought, I prayed you might be the leader all the valley is waiting for. No one will ever know what your coming meant to me, and I told myself if you were the man I had hoped for I would follow you to the end and my vaqueros with me." She passed a hand across her eyes. "Well, that's not important now. All that matters is that Frank Baker died fighting for Miracle Mesa Ranch—your ranch. He died because he had the courage others lacked." A sob silenced her, and the pleading resonant voice went on. "Just a few days ago I saw him and we talked about your coming. He was looking forward to the great things that were going to happen once you were here. He was proud to be one of your riders. He boasted about you. And this is their answer. He'll never boast about you again. He's up there, silenced and done. Don't you see what it is? It's a challenge. They are asking you what you are going to do about it—and so am I. What answer are you going to make, Jack Douglas?"

Cheeks flushed, she faced him, her whole body trembling, and looking down into that gravely suppliant face, an overwhelming desire seized him to have this undaunted girl as his ally in the fight that lay ahead. He wanted to tell her that from this moment on his life would be given to avenging Baker's death; that so long as the Miracle Mesa Ranch endured it would fight back with all its might. He wanted to tell her this, but again came the memory of Record's solemn words, "Trust no one. It is your only hope."

In the candlelight the white circle of faces watched him as if waiting. He saw the padre's faded eyes, the black figure of his aunt, and over Lola's shoulder the attentive face of Paul Bodine. They were waiting, and Alison—the most of all. . . . But—"Fight guile with guile," Record had said. Douglas drew a deep breath.

"I must think." His own voice sounded strangely irresolute. "We cannot do anything foolhardy."

He saw the light in Alison's eyes die swiftly, and bitterly he turned away—he had condemned himself to the lone fight.

Almost at once his guests took their leave. Alison went to Lola's room, and changing into a riding habit, left without seeing Douglas again. Paul Bodine alone waited until the others had departed, and as Jack walked with him to the door, he said, "We are going to be neighbors, Douglas—in these difficult times I want you to know that anything I can do I shall do gladly."

Douglas looked down. "There seems so little to do in a moment like this." His voice was uncertainty itself.

But the moment Douglas' last guest had disappeared an instant change came over him. That air of uncertainty vanished, his shoulders straightened, and turning inside, he ran up the stairs. Lights were burning in Lola's room and in his aunt's, but the hacienda was silent, and going to his own room, he pulled from a drawer a .38 automatic in a shoulder holster. Buckling it beneath his coat, he drew on a pair of riding boots, and creeping down the stairs, passed quietly out into the night.

At the stable he switched on the light, chose a tall black horse among those tethered there, and quickly saddling, rode out the gate.

Driven by a need for action, he urged on his horse, yet his thoughts, swifter, still raced back to the cedar-covered knoll where he had stood with Baker only a few hours before.

He saw again the peon, heard once more that sing-song, "Buenos dias," and remembered the malignant intentness of the man's eyes.

If that peon were part of the underground system of spies, could he be made to talk, could he somehow be made to point to those who had killed Frank Baker?

Abruptly, as if he had reached a decision, he turned his horse toward the foothills and hurried over the moonlit floor of the valley toward that grassy knoll where the peon's tent had been.

Tying his horse, Douglas approached the edge of the clearing. Almost at once he made out the weather-beaten canvas shining like a white triangle in the moonlight, then halted in quick surprise—a light was burning inside.

Still as a statue, Douglas watched. Against the sloping canvas the shadow of a man loomed from within, then another shadow passed in sharp silhouette across the tent, and Douglas knew the herder was not alone. Stooping low, he circled, and keeping to the side opposite the entrance, came nearer. Muffled voices reached him, and once, in a tone louder than the rest he heard the words, "Miracle Mesa." Something in the way the words were said, some overtone of contemptuous enmity, brought a surge of hot anger to the listening man outside, and despite the dictates of caution, he drew near the entrance until through the open flap he could look into the dimly lit interior.

Three men were there. The peon, a cigarette between his lips, lay curled among the dingy blankets that served as a bed; the other two, unmistakably Americans, sat facing the rear of the tent, so that Douglas could see only the tousled black hair of one and the broad, worn stetson of the other.

Still too far away to hear, and this time dropping on hands and knees, Douglas crept toward the back of the tent and now he crouched within a few scant inches of the canvas wall.

He heard the scratching of a match, smelt the pungent smoke of Mexican tobacco, then a voice: "You're just lucky, José. For a tip like that the Chief will give you plenty. The Brotherhood will be meeting at the morada tonight, and if anything—"

A yelp of fear drowned the voice, followed by a volley of frantic harking, and almost at Douglas' feet a small dog stood shrilly signaling the presence of an intruder to his master within. The air quivered with that incessant warning, and in quick response the three men inside started to their feet. Crouching, Douglas glanced behind him toward the sheltering fringe of trees—too far, he could not make it. Quick as a panther he darted to the entrance just as the first form emerged, the moonlight gleaming on a weapon in his hand. Before the man could see what struck him he was knocked headlong, then almost in the same motion Douglas seized the flap, whirled it closed and flung the whole weight of his body against the flimsy tent.

With a tearing of canvas and a splintering of the ridgepole, the tent collapsed, Douglas on top, while beneath him amid a stream of curses two figures struggled vainly to tear away the enfolding fabric that held them like a net. Wildly the tent bulged and heaved with their frenzied contortions, the dog fled, yelping, toward the cover of the woods, and now the night was broken with two shots fired blindly through the canvas by one of the maddened captives.

Time to go. Running easily, Douglas gained the dark shelter of the trees and hurried to his horse, then mounted without so much as a look behind.

Riding beneath the pines, keeping steadily down the slope, Douglas felt his anger mounting. But for a sheep herder's cur he might have learned the very thing he wanted to know beyond all else—the identity of Frank Baker's killers—and his mind went back to the few disjointed phrases he had heard, "the Chief—a meeting at the morada."

Suddenly he stopped in his tracks. Might not the Brotherhood, the secret organization that met in the morada, might there not be some connection between them and the raiders? It was barely likely, but even while he pondered the thought he found himself turning his horse toward the canyon. It had been near the morada that he and Baker had talked—it was toward there they had watched the sheep herder pass. There, perhaps lay Douglas' real starting point, and this very night offered him a better opportunity to explore than he might ever come again. Few would know him even if he were seen, and in the event of discovery he could say he was riding to the upper ranch for news of his murdered vaquero.

A half hour brought him to where the canyon widened into a broad amphitheater, and close against the opposite cliff Douglas saw the solitary dwelling he sought—the morada of the Brotherhood. There was something about the very place itself that aroused some instinctive hatred—it lay like a covert threat back from the trail, a low light gleaming inside, causing the window to glint vacantly out into the darkness, but the narrow door was tightly closed. Suddenly Douglas started —from somewhere within came the high notes of a flute, a long, shrill wailing that rose and fell, chilling his blood and causing his horse to move restlessly beneath him.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

The eighth and last in the current series of Crime Club mysteries, Universal's "The Witness Vanishes," will open today at the Grand Theatre.

With a cast said to be stronger than ever before assembled for a Crime Club production, the adaptation of James Ronald's original novel will be presented by Edmund Lowe and Wendy Barrie in the leading roles.

Darryl F. Zanuck's production of "Drums Along the Mohawk" promises to be the highspot of the film season here. Claudette Colbert and Henry Fonda are in the starring roles of the film which opens at the Grand on Sunday.

BRISTOL THEATRE

Swift and suspenseful, yet pervaded with human and realistic frailties, Columbia's "Hidden Power" opened at the Bristol Theatre yesterday. Starring Jack Holt in a role totally different from anything he has ever attempted before, the drama depicts a timely and engrossing tale of a conscientious and humanitarian research chemist who stumbles upon the secret of a terrible explosive.

Charles Laughton, who usually invests himself with the life as well as the clothes of the character he plays, returns to the screen as the perfect villain in "Jamaica Inn," Paramount's picturization of the Daphne duMaurier best-selling novel which comes Sunday to the Bristol Theatre.

RITZ THEATRE

When anyone reaches maturity, he likes to look back. In the publishing field this has become a predominant trend.

Hollywood likes to think itself mature these days, and to prove it 20th Century-Fox has filmed its story in Technicolor. It's Darryl F. Zanuck's production of "Hollywood Cavalcade," starring Alice Faye and Don Ameche, coming Sunday to the Ritz Theatre.

DIAMOND AND FALLS TO CLASH ON WARNER FIELD

To decide which is the best club, the Diamond and the Falls Alumni teams will clash tomorrow afternoon on Warner's field, Bristol Pike, near Morrisville. Opening kick-off is scheduled to take place at 2:30 o'clock.

The championship of the Bucks County conference will not be at stake and as this ended in a deadlock, both the Falls Alumni and the Diamond team will be awarded trophies.

Final arrangements for the game were made yesterday afternoon. It was agreed that George Riener would referee; Mike DeRisi, umpire; and Al Tomlinson, head linesman.

Coach Jimmy Doherty will start Neeley, Jadlocki, Appenzeller, Castro, Johnson, B. Appenzeller, Cappiello, Schafer, Lovett, Tomlinson, and Waslurski.

Coach Joe Diamanti of Diamond will have in his starting line-up: Jungmann, Swadis, Fletcher, Marbellio, Belinski, Smuck, Roberts, Lange, Girard, Scarborough and Effling.

A large crowd is expected to see two of the best teams in this section in action. Falls is undefeated and Diamond has lost but one game, that defeat being handed to them by Falls. Both teams defeated St. Ann's. Falls trimmed the Rees and defeated and tied Langhorne while Diamond also beat Langhorne.

COFFEY'S BOWLERS WIN FIRST-HALF TITLE

"Yale" Kyniak lead the Coffey's boys to a 3 to 1 victory over Detweiler, hitting 546. Bennett was high for the "Ice Men", 479.

Knights of Columbus and "Dot's" split two all. Steyer lead with 471. Gavanag was high for the "Irish", 487.

Rohm & Haas won 3 points from Sinclair. Maughan with 501 and Appenzeller, 435, were high.

Canal and Parkway Appear To Be Assured

will not do away with the necessity for continued work by the association he represents which has many thousands of members, no small number of whom are non-residents of this section, who appreciate the importance of the river valley's beauty and its recreational opportunities for Bucks countians and the millions of residents of the Eastern part of this country.

Mr. Taylor who has given an immense amount of his time and energy to helping the association get the 40 mile canal and parkway for the State for public use, that the least Bucks countians can do to help is to contribute the 50 cents a year membership dues to help bear the expenses.

He spoke of the canal-parkway both as an artist who sees its beauty and as a utilitarian who sees what it means to the fame of Bucks county and the pleasure it can give to millions of people.

Every foot of it is filled with beauty, he says, and to prove it exhibited a number of photographs taken some years ago.

But the beauty must be preserved from vandals, he pointed out, and that will be part of the association's future job, in co-operation with the State.

Mr. Taylor made an appeal to Rotarians to help encourage the public to pay more attention to esthetics—something the average person has not done, especially the male part of the population, who leave even the decoration of their homes, particularly its walls to women. But, in that connection, Mr. Taylor commented that women have been doing a good job directed toward preserving the beauties of the county and the State.

Incidentally, he praised Assemblymen Yeakel and Stockman for their aid in sponsoring the bills providing for turning the canal-parkway over to the State. He also paid a tribute to the artists and other noted people of the Delaware Valley who have caused it to be famous for their presence and their products, and thus gained for that part of Bucks county extensive publicity—and who have helped with the battle to preserve this beauty.

dent, Stevenson W. Fletcher, George School; second vice-president, Francis C. Pyle, George School; third vice-president, Wendell Oliver, Morrisville; recording secretary, Mrs. Walter Styer, Woodbourne; corresponding secretary, Mrs. John Chambers, Newtown; treasurer, Miss Anna Cliff, Langhorne; publicity chairman, Miss Mary G. Wilson, George School; membership chairman, Mrs. William R. Stuckert, Newtown.

These officers will have charge of arrangements for lectures, field trips, and an educational service to be offered the high school science classes in the county.

Mr. Fletcher told of recent plantings at George School, including a row of pin oaks along the pike, a group of some 14 types of crab-apples, and a large number of roses (these both in the south campus near the reflecting pool); some very early azaleas and eight nursery firms.

Wendell Oliver spoke briefly of the ferns he had found during a New England trip—sensitive ferns, bracken and crested shields were found to grow much more luxuriantly there than in this section.

The following new members were received: Mr. and Mrs. William Breuninger, Langhorne; Miss Emma Duckworth, Miss Louise Hartman, Robert McKenney, Dr. Raymond Hennessy, Newtown; Miss Grace L. Brokaw, Howard M. Buckman, George School.

the country. Mrs. Beidler then told how the school here is operated, the government paying the teachers, and providing food for the tots. The little folks, many of them lacking proper food otherwise, are served a hot meal at noon-time at the school, the government agency stressing that such shall include meat, a freshly-cooked vegetable, a raw vegetable, milk, whole-wheat bread sandwich, butter, dessert, etc. Specified amounts of fruit juices, and of cod liver oil, are given each child daily, and in mid-afternoon they are served graham crackers and milk. Fifty children are now aided at the school, they coming from families on relief, and WPA rolls, and from low income groups. Of the five employed at the school, three are from Bristol. The children are examined daily, Mrs. Beidler said, and should rashes, colds, etc., be discovered, they are sent home. A large portion of each day is spent outdoors, and a period provided for rest. "They enjoy their second servings too," said Mrs. Beidler, "and on Mondays after being away from the school for the week-end, they ask for third helpings. We can't seem to fill them up on that day."

Mothers of the tots who meet once weekly, are provided with information that will aid the health of their families, and exchange ideas. The children cared for range from two to four years, but if there is a real need they are retained until five or 5½ years old.

The formation of the Bucks County Association, Committee of '76, was told of by Mrs. Tomb, who stated that it works for the betterment of the county, particularly as to planning and zoning. Mrs. Pope informed of activities of Bristol Branch of the Needlework Guild, mentioning there is scarcely a day in the year but one some needy individual asks the Guild for clothing. She told of the method of collection and distribution of garments to the unfortunate, with several hundred distributed since the exhibition in November. Mrs. Williams told of the real need filled in the community by the free library, concluding by reading excerpts from "Green Grows the City" by Beverly Nichols.

A lullaby, played as a piano solo by Mrs. Albert Dowden; the singing of Christmas carols by the members; and reading of an original poem by Mrs. DuHamel, added to the pleasure of the afternoon. Mrs. DeLong, secretary, read a letter from the county federation president, Mrs. Calvin Boyer, Doylestown, in which she outlined hopes for the club for the year to come.

Bensalem Students Are Given Awards

In conclusion, he read the poem entitled: "The Prayer of a Sportsman." Then he gave the "Motto for Daily Living" as set forth by the late Theodore Roosevelt. It reads as follows: "Don't flinch, don't foul, but hit the line hard."

Captain Charlie Mudie, in the absence of superintendent Samuel K. Faust, presented Miss Celia Snyder, supervising principal, with the "Big Brown Jug," the token won by the Owls in the "Little Three Conference." Upon presenting it to Miss Snyder for the school on behalf of the squad, Mudie said he hoped the jug would stay at Bensalem for many years to come. He also presented her with the ball from the Alumni game which is a token to the winning team.

COMMUNICATION

Bristol, Pa., Dec. 14, 1939
Editor, The Courier,
Bristol, Pa.

Dear Sir:
I wish the public to know that our game ("Rees") last Sunday, with Falls Alumni, was played under a misrepresentation. The game was originally scheduled as a championship game. But the announcements in the paper on Friday and Saturday of last week that the title was under dispute between Falls and Andalusia, caused some of the Rees players to think the game would not go on. But in line with the Rees' policy, no game in the county has ever been turned down, so the game was played.

Fans who saw the game know that after the first quarter and the first five minutes of the second quarter, when Falls scored all their points, the Rees completely dominated the play. The game was played up to this point by Rees with men short in four positions. When the regulars went in the tide of game immediately changed.

All the Rees' players, who wish to play in the return game with Falls at Bristol high school field on Christmas Day, must report at Leedom's field on Sunday afternoon at 1:30, so that they may either redeem themselves to their followers or bow to Coach Doherty's proteges as undisputed champions of Bucks County.

GEORGE V. DOUGHERTY,
Coach of Bristol "Rees"

Complaints Like These Help Our Business

Fuel Short-Weight Warning Issued

With the advent of cooler weather and the fears of a war-created shortage combining to make householders lay in unusually large supplies of fuel oil, Morton Witkin, president of the county commissioners, warned yesterday against short-weight frauds.

The Bureau of Weights and Measures, Witkin declared, has received numerous complaints during the last few days, and in the process of re-checking fuel oil amounts has "found several possible shortages."

"We urge the public in purchasing fuel oil to take care and check up on its purchases, particularly if the dealer is unknown to the purchaser, or is selling at unusually low prices," Witkin said.

That's why such complaints increase the known value of our reputation for honest, dependable service.

Ask us about WEATHER CONTROL delivery service that protects you against fuel oil shortage regardless of weather conditions.
